Cookie Policy

1. Introduction

This Cookie Policy ("the policy") was last updated and published on 02 June 2025. By visiting our website, you may consent, or not, to the use of different categories of cookies. Cookies are small bits of text that are downloaded to your computer or other internet enabled devices when you visit a website.

When you are navigating on our website, cookies enable Alunafi Ltd. to collect in various manners information related to the use of the website with the intent of improving your overall user experience. So, cookies are kind of personal data, which is information collected from you and other third parties that specifically identifies you as an individual from the European GDPR regulation ("GDPR": General Data Protection Regulation – Regulation (EU) 2016/679) point of view. For further information, our Privacy Policy can be found on our website.

2. Type of cookies

Cookies can be classified in two different ways, by "life span" and by "domain".

There are two types of cookies categorised by "life span":

- Session cookies: they only last for the duration of a single browsing session, so they don't have an expiration time. They are deleted once the browser is closed and are therefore not saved on user's device.
- Persistent cookies: they have an expiration date that is appropriate for the information being stored, so they do remain stored on the user's terminal device for a certain duration. They are not automatically erased. Your browser sends these cookies back to the website every time you visit it again, so it can remember your preferences and tailor what you see on the screen.

When it comes to the "domain", a distinction is made between:

- First-party cookies that are cookies set by the website you're visiting. No other website can read them.
- Third-party cookies that are set by websites when they are using external services, which drop their own cookies.

3. What are the cookies we use on our website?

Here are the different cookies we use on our website:

Necessary cookies – help make a website usable by enabling basic functions like page navigation and access to secure areas of the website. The website cannot function properly without these cookies so there are automatically allowed.

Marketing cookies – are used to track visitors across websites so you can choose to deny or allow their use at any time. The intention is to display ads that are relevant and engaging for the individual user and thereby more valuable for publishers and third-party advertisers.

Preference cookies – enable a website to remember information that changes the way the website behaves or looks, like your preferred language or the region that you are in, so you can choose to deny or allow their use at any time.
